Spa Cover Care Guidelines

Cleaning and Protecting Your Cover.

Your custom spa cover's outer covering or "skin" is fabricated using a "Marine-Grade" vinyl. In order to keep this skin looking great and performing well you should clean and condition your cover with products designed for Marine-Grade Vinyl only. WE DO NOT RECOMMEND PRODUCTS SUCH AS ARMOR ALL OR SON OF A GUN TO CLEAN OR CONDITION YOUR SPA COVER SKIN.

Your cover and chemical damage.

The environment created when your spa cover remains on the spa for extended periods of time is very harsh and can be extremely damaging to the underside of your spa cover, as well as to the vapor wrap, foam inserts and zippers. Maintaining proper water balance is one key to prolonging the life of your cover. Although your cover does not actually contact the water of your spa, it is constantly subjected to water and chemical vapor created by the high temperatures of your spa water. Discolored or wrinkled spa cover bottoms are a result of chemical or ozone damage. Covers on spas that are not regularly used or opened for maintenance can prematurely deteriorate due to chemical or ozone attack.

Shocking Your Spa.

Shocking your spa is a common maintenance task which is good for maintaining clean and safe water, but is also a practice that can be detrimental to your spa cover. When shocking your spa after use or as an ordinary maintenance procedure, allow your spa to remain UNCOVERED for at least 20 to 30 minutes with the spa running. This will allow the oxidation process to "gas-off" and will help prevent harmful chemical vapors trapped under the cover from causing damage to your spa cover.

Spas Using Ozone.

Many spas use ozone generators as a part of their sanitizing system. Ozone is a very strong oxidizer. If overused or not allowed to vent off on a regular basis, ozone can damage your spa cover. A spa that is rarely used will often release a large amount of Ozone when the cover is finally opened. This constantly trapped Ozone is a common cause of damage to spa cover vinyl and zippers.

Foam Insert Care

Your foam inserts are made from Expanded Polystyrene (EPS). EPS foam can absorb water vapor. This is why your Custom Spa Cover has a Polyethylene vapor wrap heat sealed around it. Damage to this vapor wrap due to excessive weight loads, punctures or dragging the cover, can result in your foam inserts becoming water-logged and heavy.

Inground, In-Deck, Large or Difficult to Maneuver Covers

Covers of this type should be handled or moved by more than one person. Dragging your cover on any surface can damage not only the outside marine grade vinyl skin and vinyl bottom, but can also damage the inside vapor wrap and inserts. This damage is not covered under warranty.

From all of us at Custom Spa Covers, Thank You!
